

I remembered we DID have a house phone many years ago

Around the time when we had a box shaped tv that box shaped tv by the way had a video game that looked like pack man but just had a... man... man

Either way that was first and last house phone I've seen in person, it was red and... looked like a house phone

Pretty self explanatory even though it wasn't the type of phone that had a circle of numbers that you'd have to turn I remember it having buttons

but also we had a small fire place, it had metal legs, small metal box you could put the planks in it and a long tube moving up to a wall and to the outside also I remember having a mcdonalds toy back then which was capable of playing one song that I really liked back then, pretty much my first favorite music ever

---

I remember me seeing my niece playing a guitar and how I wanted to try it

Then they asked if I wanted to learn how to play guitar which I decided not to

I also only learnt how to play a piano in a very brief period while my older sister pretty much became a master on it

That wasn't even recent it was years ago he hit a rock from the debris made by the car crash into a gun's trigger in order to make it shoot on its own and then threw it close to the crashed car so that people would be distracted from the noise making them think he's trying to shoot them while the dust of cement blinds them while he runs towards the middle ground desperately trying to get the mini nuke close enough to the dictator

Again he's no assassin nor soldier nor anything he's literally just a dude with a car and a small nuke that he got from someone in the future so that ( other than him having to dodge and hide from rockets that flew to his direction ) was the most dangerous thing he could've done in the war

I forced myself to smile

after watching the 2019 Joker movie I thought to myself if I could teach myself how to laugh when I experienced strong negative emotions so that I could hide all of the sorrow by instead of sounding like I was screaming in anger or crying out loud but instead was releasing energy through the voice of my laughter

I couldn't test that since I didn't experience that strong of emotions but I did once after mom told me to do something that I was totally against which was of her wanting me to have a relationship with my class mates and I realized it is possible, I wasn't screaming in furty or crying out loud I was laughing even if I had a negative reaction

I actually tried acting like I was laughing but hated the experience in front of a mirror like in the Joker movie when Arthur didn't want to laugh and looked like he was feeling uncomfortable and sad when he was

New project idea

After making the "trailer" to go away stay away I want to make an epic animation of Gabriel from minecraft story mode revealing he doesn't remember himself

I'll try to make the animation far better than before

And also make it more effective by revealing the color of the eyes AFTER he asks who Gabriel is

Then Jessie's eye shrinking close to the camera with purple reflecting off his eye

And then credits with the wither storm's music in the background

gameplay project idea that we should totally do... in another channel a series of gameplays that will be done by me adding cut out mouthes and eyes to recreate expressions

The voice would sound robotic and inhuman even if it had a hint of my voice in it in the games I would sometimes try to communicate with the audience using any limited things I could find like if I found many letters in games I'd make a fake cough while having my mouse on a letter to then spell out things like "this is not me" or if there were limited letters I could work with "ths s not m" in the end of the series I would pause mid reaction, breathe in breathe out and say "I'll be honest and try to fill you in about as much as possible, I miss his work even if he's not with us anymore I believe we can still continue his legacy, I don't want fame I don't want to anger anyone I just... miss him"

The first episode will actually be a normal playthrough but in the end I'll casually mention that I'll have to drive somewhere which will show that something will happen that day

A week later a new video would pop up of me as that edited character

I would be very happy in the first few videos but then descend to being more sad and negative until the last episode because in that universe people would start hating the person who tried to recreate him because they thought he was doing it for fame

it would be a story of how after a person died and people missed them some would go on with their lives excepting death as an inevitability while people who were good at mimicking the creator would try as hard as they could to recreate the creator

I'm not saying I'll ever get to the point that this will happen to me hell no

I just want to make an example

Also I need to remember to make the commentary interesting not only showing different character personality like the actor sounding European and psychopathic while depression sounding like he woke up at 3 am but also making the SOUNDS more appealing like how Jacksepticeye calms down just to scream up into the heavens again

It would be like a sound/emotional rollecoaster also I'll have to re record my reactions by compiling voices that sound like they were recorded from different times from different videos all mushed together

That will also allow me to make different responses and more creative ways of making the video more enjoyable

And yes I'll be playing horror games because I hate myself... actually this will be a quote of every episode also the text saying "I'm not me" would happen throughout multiple episodes

---

if my mom is a smoker, my dad is pretty close to being a conspiracy theorist (at least he sounds like it when he tries to explain what GOD is or tries to make sense of why the moon reflects the light of the sun "the wrong way"), and both of my sisters are addicts to an app that is flat out disgusting making my little sister a spoiled brat who can be a human being who I can talk to and be with without losing my mind?

Well... it's Grandma but the problem is she doesn't know English so it's very difficult for me to talk to her about things and even then sometimes she doesn't understand what I'm trying to say

So not only can I not meet a sane person in my own school apparently my whole family is made of weirdoes who don't even try to push me to work as hard as they're pushing my older sister

Which means that the only normal thing to do for me would be to stay away from them and their influence as much as possible the only other person I can think of is the reader but I can't get to know them in any sort of way

I... realized from the game "coffee talk" unresolved arguments are dangerous so if we argued about anything and didn't take care of that it would be worse

I have no sweet clue how to do that but I'm thankful the game gave such a nice message

I've realized that there can be another reason why I might be completely meaningless in the future not because people would start thinking that they shouldn't care about the dead or because everybody would get brainwashed by huge corporations

It would be because there would be too many people to care about

Too many people to get to know too many people who's lives will never be fully appreciated

I'm terrible at remembering words and saying them when I want to say them like today... or tonight technically it's 3:39 AM right now

I wanted to comment in a video of Markiplier's compilation of him saying the name Tumph over and over

I checked out that video immediately after I've heard Markiplier ask for it, then I continued watching and realized Mark said the name Tumph when he was next to a gramophone which was playing... all star?

anyway I had no sweet clue what Gramophone was called and I almost called it xylophone but I misspelled it and googled it realizing how dumb I was

I had no sweet clue how to find out what it was named so I did the only rational thing I could do

I searched up how to shrink Tomatoes in Hello Neighbor... yep that was the first thing that popped in my mind when trying to find out its name so I checked if someone had it written in a thumbnail... nope then see if they said it in the video, I decided not to watch the entire freaking thing for it so then I looked down into the comments and finally found the word “gramophone (no joke I had to look back to what I wrote down because I already forgot about that)”

So if that doesn't show what kind of stupid things I'm forced to do and how much time I'm wasting trying to find a flipping word this probably should sometimes I just try to remember a forgotten word from somebody saying it on Youtube because I'd remember that line like let's say “Everybody likes tomatoes, everyone likes Tomatoes mam” Captainsauce saying it to a lady in Job Simulator or... it's much harder me trying to remind myself of those instead of them coming onto me when I forget the word that I'm trying to remember that they said

“at least I don't remember having to mark my footsies while filing my taxes” Food Theory episode about... something, he sung a song about how everything will be taxed like how they tax the street when you get too cold tax the heat and something something they tax your feet or how Jacksepticeye talked about having a Narrator in real life and how great it would be to be able to know what would happen by their help in Stanley Parable Ultra Deluxe but I have recorded that part and replayed it ( even if it was couple of months ago ) so I don't think it's fair for me to say that that was random enough for me to remember

---

I think this proved enough I'll come back again if I remember a phrase

---

friction

I had to check Matpat's video about portal to remember that word because I remember him talking about how friction would make a slight drag force against a pole falling into and out of a portal "infinitely"